

themes

Religion students build their major around “areas of study” or “themes” that cross traditions/regions/approaches.

For the latter, students can design a theme or pick from one of the following:

- Religion and Political Life
- Religion, Text, and Media
- Religion and Social Identities

QUICK REFERENCE CARD

REQUIREMENTS

REL 399 - Junior Colloquium

One Critical Approaches Course

Four Electives (2 of which can be cognates)

Three courses in any subfield connected by a theme

Total of 9 courses

Religion Major >>>>>>>>>>

For a detailed description of the themes track visit:

religion.princeton.edu

Questions? Email
Professor Bryan Lowe
or Michelle Medici

religion.princeton.edu

Area of Study

QUICK REFERENCE CARD

REQUIREMENTS

Religion students build their major around “themes” or “areas of study” defined by a tradition, approach, or region/time. For the latter, students can pick from any of these five areas:

- Ancient Judaism, Christianity, and Greek and Roman Religions
- Islam
- Religion in the Americas
- Religions of Asia
- Philosophical and Ethical Approaches to Religion

Total of 9 courses

Religion Major

For a detailed description of the themes track visit:

religion.princeton.edu

Questions? Email
Professor Bryan Lowe
or Michelle Medici

religion.princeton.edu